ANNOUNCEMENT Of A New Machine In Hope Star's Plant

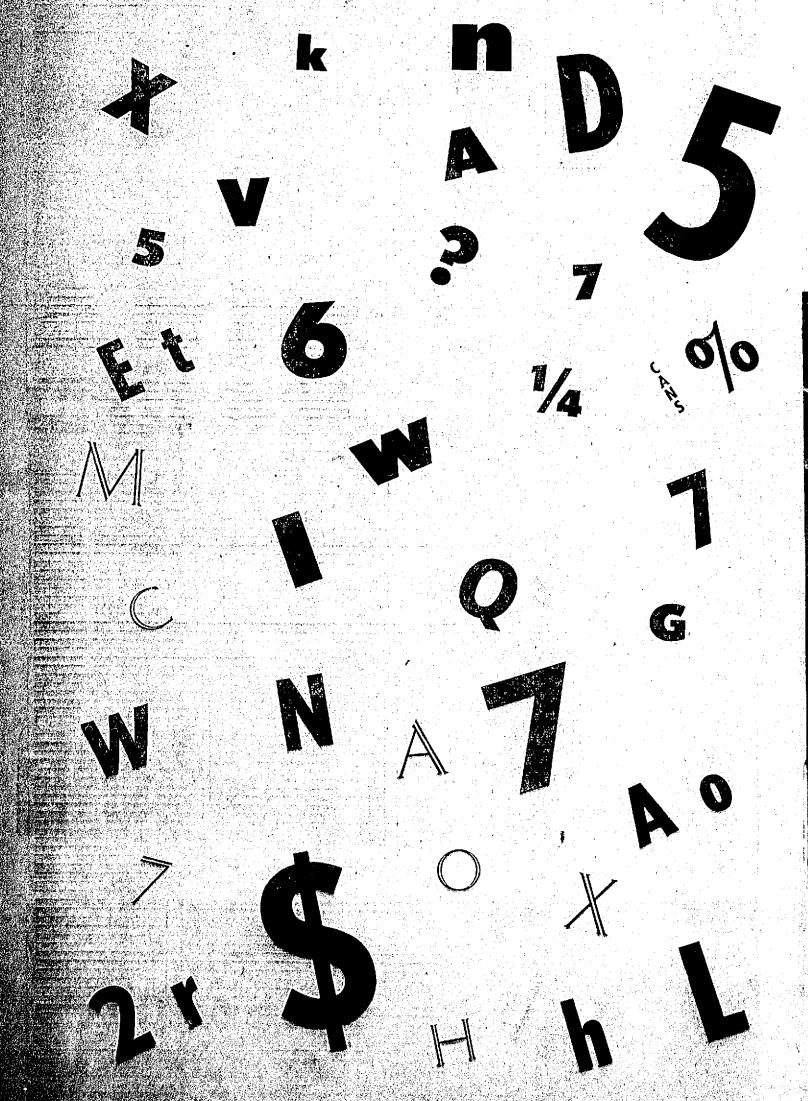

Photographed November 15, 1956; in the Hope Star's composing room — the new Ludlow machine in eground, and beyond it the new matrix cabinet housing 14 fonts of brass dies. The men in the picture are Perry Arnold, Atlanta, Ga., service representative of the Ludlow Typograph Co. of Chicago, on the left; and Hope Star now has in production a Ludlow display type casting machine with 14 fonts of brass matrices or dies ranging from 36-point up to giant 96 and an additional series of figures only in 144-point.

The old system of handsetting foundry type has been discarded. The new machine produces fresh slugs for each advertisement or multi-column news head-

Production under the old foundry type system was limited to the number of block letters in a newspaper's cases — but with the slug-casting Ludlow the only limit to production is the amount of metal which a newspaper has available to melt down in the new machine.

With the exception of the pictures and the Linotype lines everything on this page was produced by the new Ludlow — a long step forward by Hope Star in its continuing service to the advertising and reading public of Southwest Arkansas.

Here's how the Ludlow works: George Hosmer's hand is holding the "stick" containing the original brass letter dies or matrices which has just gone through the slug-casting machine — while alongside it is the slugof printing metal which the machine has cast. The dies then go back to their individual letter boxes in the cabinet, while the slug is put in the page form for the printing press. Next morning the slug will be thrown in the furnace to be remelted — and a new slug will be cast for the next edition.

Years ago this process was perfected in the Linotype for all reading type and news headlines --- except the yery largest. Now the Ludlow does the same thing for the big display type used in advertisements and multi-column headlines. The dies and slugs in the above picture show "The Hope Star" spelled out in 96-point Tempo To City Subscribers:

first national Thanksgiving was passed in Congress despite vigorous debate, and George Wash ington set aside Thursday, Nov. 26, 1789, as "a day of Public Thanksgiving and Prayer." Presi dent Lincoln, influenced greatly by the pleas of Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, issued a National Thanksgiving Proclamation on Oct. 3, 1863.—in the midst of the Civil War-making Thanksgiving an annual holiday. Since that time, every President has proclaimed Thanksgiving a legal holiday, on which the whole nation closes its shops, offices, schools and banks, and offers thanks
